Ms. Hyun Jin is currently providing litigation and advisory services as a member of Jipyong's the Labor & Employment Group. She has extensive experience in a wide range of cases involving human resources, labor, and labor-related litigation and advisory services, and specializes in the legal and logical construction of cases where no precedent has been established.

Ms. Jang graduated from Korea University School of Law in 2017 and joined as a member of Jipyong's the Labor & Employment Group. He received a Ph.D. in social law (labor law) from Korea University Graduate School of General Studies in 2024. Based on her expertise in labor law and extensive experience and understanding of various labor cases, she provides reasonable advice to help resolve disputes.

Ms. Jang has successfully conducted a wide range of litigation and advisory services related to labor relations act, including individual labor relation cases (such as wages and salaries, discipline, worker status, discrimination, sexual harassment and workplace harassment, etc.), collective labor relation cases (such as responding to trade unions, unfair labor practices, labor injunctions, collective bargaining, industrial disputes, worker status under the Trade Union Act, duties of fair representation, etc.), and illegal dispatch cases. In addition, with extensive experience in handling cases of the Labor Relations Commission, she provides one-stop service for handling contentious cases from trial to litigation procedures.

Furthermore, she provides comprehensive and effective advisory services in all fields of labor laws, including providing advice and consulting on preventive labor issues such as internal subcontracting, comprehensive wages, and worker status based on due diligence, providing agent investigation and support for workplace harassment and sexual harassment, providing advisory services on trade unions and collective bargaining, and responding to a petition case by the National Human Rights Commission.

She is actively engaged in publishing academic articles, professional media, and case reviews in the field of labor law, and has participated as a panelist in the regular seminars of the Labor Law Practice Study Group at the Supreme Court.
